

Overview

Regardless of your age and experience level, you can enjoy one of the most luxurious and visually stunning trips in Nepal.

The Ghorepani Poon Hill Trek is a popular, short, and enjoyable trek for tourists of all ages and levels of experience in the Annapurna region of Nepal. The trek usually takes 4-5 days and offers stunning chain views of the Annapurna and Dhaulagiri Mountain ranges. After new motorable road construction, the trail has been shortened. Nowadays, the trek starts in Hile village and ends in Ghandruk village. The pleasant and picturesque trek passes through charming villages, tranquil pine, oak, and rhododendron forests, crystal clear perennial rivers, and terraced fields. The main attraction of the trek is the opportunity to witness one of the most beautiful sunrise views from Poon Hill, which offers panoramic views of the surrounding western mountains, as well as the chance to experience the unique culture and lifestyle of the local ethnic groups and relax in the beautiful city of Pokhara.

During a Ghorepani and Chitwan trip, tourists can expect very good accommodations, hygiene meals, and warm hospitality from the local people.

Chitwan National Park is a UNESCO World Heritage site located in the Terai region of Nepal. The park is known for its rich biodiversity, including the endangered one-horned rhinoceros, Bengal tiger, and Asian elephant. A visit to Chitwan offers an opportunity to explore the jungle through a variety of activities, such as elephant safaris, jungle walks, and canoe rides on the Rapti River. Visitors can also learn about the local Tharu culture and enjoy traditional dance performances.

Combining these two destinations can create a diverse and rewarding itinerary that showcases the natural beauty and cultural richness of Nepal. Typically, visitors would complete the trek first and then head to Chitwan National Park for a few days of wildlife spotting and jungle exploration.
